Belt and Road Countries' Laws and Regulations Research Series

CCPIT launched the research project on Belt and Road countries' laws and regulations in 2016. 64 Belt and Road countries was successfully completed. Subsequently, the Department of Legal Affairs of CCPIT and China Economic Information Service published the relevant work in the form of a series of books to provide Chinese businesses with first-hand practical legal information and practical cases of legal risks in terms of foreign investment, trade, taxation, finance, land, labor and environmental protection in the countries concerned. It serves as a reference for Chinese businesses to carry out investment and cooperation in relevant countries and a window into the local laws and regulations as well.

In 2019, the above Series was selected into "Extraordinary Journey, Magnificent Achievements -- the Grand Exhibition of Achievements in Commemoration of the 70th Anniversary of the Founding of the People's Republic of China".

The Global Economic and Trade Measures Index (GETMI)

CCPIT compiles and releases the reports of the Global Economic and Trade Measures Index (GETMI) for quantitative analysis of global economic and trade frictions. It selects 20 major countries/regions as its research subjects according to their representativeness in the global trade and economy, shares in trade with China, and their geological locations. By calculating and analyzing basic data of technical trade measures, trade remedy measures, import and export control measures, tariff measures, and other restrictive measures, GETMI gives its prediction on the trends of global economic and trade frictions, filling in the blank of comprehensive quantitative analysis and research in this field. GETMI releases monthly and annual reports.

Selection and Publication of Investment Arbitration Cases

With the continuous advancement of "the Belt and Road Initiative" and the accelerated pace of "Going Global" by Chinese businesses, China has successfully turned from a country using foreign capital to a country investing abroad, which marks a leapfrog development of its outbound investment. At present, China is the second largest source of foreign investment, and the amount of foreign investment it attracts also ranks second in the world. Naturally, the need for professional and specialized interpretation of international investment dispute arbitration cases has emerged from Chinese businesses. In light of this, the Department of Legal Affairs of CCPIT entrusted Institute of International Law, Wuhan University to conduct related case studies, with a view to providing tangible and useful public legal service for businesses going global.

Global Intellectual Property Protection Index (GIPPI)

In order to meet the needs of the government and the industrial and commercial circles accessing and evaluating the information on global IP Protection, CCPIT launched a research on relevant indices. On the basis of sufficient research and thorough discussion, 15 major countries are selected as research objects according to their representativeness in the global economy, trade and investment, their shares in trade with China, geographic location and their IP protection activeness, etc. The news and information on their IP protection are collected and released all year round. On the basis of the research and studies on the foundation, environment, management, international cooperation and performance of IP protection, etc., CCPIT will build an index system and eventually compile the Reports on Global IP Protection Index.
